

Connected Care is Better Care

CurrentCare is Rhode Island's Health Information Exchange (HIE). It helps your doctors and other healthcare providers share important information about your health. Think of it like a secure online filing cabinet for your health records. It's safe AND saves time for you and your doctors.

How does CurrentCare help me?

Connect Care

"When I can't give my medical history, CurrentCare shares it with my doctors and nurses."

Save Time

"Helps my doctors make smart choices and avoid extra tests—saves me time, money and effort."

Improve Care

"CurrentCare helps my providers deliver great care, improve my health and give me peace of mind."

What are my choices?

- To share your CurrentCare health record with doctors who treat you, you don't need to do anything.
- To "opt out" of sharing your CurrentCare health record with treating doctors, you can complete an Opt-Out Form (see below).
- Per RI law, there are three exceptions to opt-out requests:
 1. Public health reporting, such as the reporting of infectious diseases to public health officials
 2. Temporary access to health information in the event of an emergency
 3. Health plans where information is necessary for care management, quality, and performance measure reporting

An Opt-Out Form only needs to be completed once to opt out of CurrentCare. You don't need to complete one for each doctor or each medical facility. You can opt back in at any time.
